The short answer Interpretation: our reading of the passages, not their words

No, these writers do not teach that stars and angels are the same thing. They name angels and stars as separate works of God and treat stars as lights set in the sky. Clement of Alexandria uses wandering stars as a picture of fallen ones, and Origen says stars praise God, but neither calls every star an angel.

POINT 1 OF 7

Angels and stars are named as separate

Our note · compiled by machine learning · Interpretation: our reading of the passages, not their words

Novatian lists the parts of creation that honor God one by one. Angels adore him, stars wonder at him, seas bless him and lands revere him. He treats angels and stars as two different kinds of creatures, each praising God in its own way.

1 “The universal and complete nature of all things, visible and invisible, bears witness to Him. Angels adore Him. Stars wonder at Him. Seas bless Him.”

POINT 2 OF 7

Stars are lights God set in the sky

Our note · compiled by machine learning · From the text: says what the passages say

An early church prayer thanks God for giving the sun to rule the day and the moon and stars to rule the night. Origen adds that Moses says these lights were made on the fourth day, and that they light the earth but are not the true light, who is Christ.

2 “O God, the God of spirits and of all flesh, who is beyond compare and needs nothing, who has given the sun to rule over the day, and the moon and the stars to rule over the night, now also look down on us with gracious eyes, and receive our morning thanksgivings, and have mercy on us.”

3 “But Moses says that those lights of the world came into existence on the fourth day, and since they shine on the things of the earth, they are not the true light.”

POINT 3 OF 7

Stars move only by God's command

Our note · compiled by machine learning · From the text: says what the passages say

Clement of Rome describes the heavens as an orderly creation. The sun, moon and starry hosts move in harmony and keep to the limits God set for them. Stars here are part of the created order that obeys its Maker.

4 “The sun and moon, along with the starry hosts, move in harmony according to His command, staying within their limits, without any deviation.”

POINT 4 OF 7

Christians refused to worship angels or stars

Our note · compiled by machine learning · From the text: says what the passages say

Origen explains why Christians will not treat angels, sun, moon or stars as gods. He points to the law of Moses, which warned God's people not to look up at the host of heaven and worship it.

5 “And if it is necessary for us to offer a defense of our refusal to recognize as gods, equally with angels, and sun, and moon, and stars, those who are called by the Greeks manifest and visible divinities, we shall answer that the law of Moses knows that these latter have been apportioned by God among all the nations under heaven, but not among those who were selected by God as His chosen people above all the nations of the earth.”

EARLY CHRISTIAN WRITER Origen, Against Celsus 10 (c. 215–254 AD) Source 13, page 6 Read it in the library ›

POINT 5 OF 7

Origen says stars praise God and wait

Our note · compiled by machine learning · Interpretation: our reading of the passages, not their words

Origen answers a critic who said Christians think nothing of the stars. He says the sun, moon and stars wait for the revealing of God's sons and calls them mighty beings that praise God. He does not say here that they are angels.

6 “But regarding these, we acknowledge that they too are waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God.”

later in the same passage

“But if Celsus had read the countless other passages where we speak of the sun, moon, and stars, and especially these: "Praise Him, all you stars, and you, O light," and, "Praise Him, you heaven of heavens," he would not have said that we consider such mighty beings, which greatly praise the Lord God, to be of no value.”

POINT 6 OF 7

Wandering stars picture those who fall away

Our note · compiled by machine learning · From the text: says what the passages say

Explaining Jude's letter, Clement of Alexandria says the wandering stars stand for people who go astray. He compares them to stars that fell from the places of the angels. This is picture language for apostasy, not a claim that all stars are angels.

7 “Wandering stars” means that those who go astray and become apostates are like that kind of stars which fell from the places of the angels. For their apostasy, the blackness of darkness is reserved forever.”

POINT 7 OF 7

Fallen angels left heaven and the stars

Our note · compiled by machine learning · Interpretation: our reading of the passages, not their words

Clement of Alexandria says the angels who did not keep their rank left their home, which he explains as heaven and the stars. Origen likewise speaks of Lucifer, the morning star, falling from heaven. Here stars mark the high place angels once held.

8 “And the angels," he says, "that did not keep their own pre-eminence"—that is, the rank they had received through advancement—"but left their own habitation," meaning heaven and the stars, became, and are called, apostates.”

THE LIMITS

What these passages don’t tell us

- These passages do not explain why Scripture sometimes uses stars as a picture for angels.
- Origen calls the stars mighty beings that praise God, but these passages do not say what kind of beings he thought they were.
- A word-for-word match shows that a quotation really is in our text. It does not show that our reading of it is right, or who wrote each work.

ABOUT THIS STUDY

A THF member asked “Did the early Christians believe stars are angels?” on June 25, 2026. The Historic Faith answered it as a public study on November 9, 2026.

Library only. This study was written only from The Historic Faith’s library of early-Christian writings and the Bible, never from the web. Every passage we kept from what the library gave is listed above, with a link to read it.

How it was made. Compiled by machine learning from The Historic Faith’s library of early-Christian writings and the Bible only. Every quotation was matched word for word against our stored text. Not yet reviewed by The Historic Faith.

How to cite this study.
